Warns Of Speculation In Palestine

The economic correspondent of the "Haaretz" of (Tel-Aviv) draws attention to the recent growth of speculation in property and land in Palestine.

During the last few months, he says, there has been an abnormal rise in prices of property which, if allowed to develop, will do much harm to the future of the Yishuv.

Every country, and especially immigration countries, have from time to time experienced booms in property. It is usually traced to social factors such as shortage of houses and increase in population. But a dangerous situation arises when the movement of prices becomes independent of social factors. Profit from speculation-sales leads to further advances in prices and to new profits. After a year or two the vicious circle is broken, the fever is over, and the country's economy is left in a weak and anaemic state.

Lately there were cases of doubling of property prices within two months. Unfortunately, many people only pay lip-service to the fight against speculation. The idea seems to be rooted that purchase and sale of land is a more or less normal form of business-transaction. How else can one explain the carelessness of the Municipal heads of Tel-Aviv, when they hastened to make public the extension of the city's boundaries and the proposed loan of £5,000,-000?

According to one of the municipal councillors these announcements [illegible] the [illegible] the landers of Tel-Aviv refused to sell even when offered exhibitant prices. They preferred to wait and to benefit from the

Mandel Was Great French Patriot

Georges Mandel, former French Minister of the Interior and the right-hand man of Georges Clemenceau during the World War, died in a German prison, according to word received in New York by the National Broadcasting Company from a correspondent in Berne, Switzerland. He would have been fifty-eight years old.

Mandel was born Jeroboam Rothschild in a Paris suburb, and he was considered second only to Blum as the outstanding Jew in French politics. Unlike Blum, he was a staunch conservative and played a prominent part in the overthrow of many French governments.

The story of what happened to Mandel after the fall of France was told in New York in April, 1942, by Henri Bernstein, distinguished French playwright, in a speech delivered before the Women's Division of the American Jewish Congress.

Mandel was in Bordeaux when Petain and Laval came into power on June 16, 1940.

"At Bordeaux," said Mr. Bernstein, "we urged Mandel to go with us to England, from which we had arranged to sail to North Africa. But this sickly man, in whom the soul of Clemenceau goes marching on, answered: 'I love Great Britain, but I will not set foot on the French Empire from a foreign battleship. All my efforts have been devoted to national defense. I will go to Morocco on a French boat. I will stir up the empire to revolt'."

Mandel and Paul Reynaud, who was Premier when France collapsed, were transferred to a German prison on personal orders of Adolf Hitler in the fall of 1942. Last April they were joined by Edouard Daladier, Premier when [illegible] and General Maurice Gamelin, Allied generalissimo early in the war.

All five of these men were imprisoned by the Vichy government

Brooklynite Is Only Fur Broker In Russia

The distinction of employing the only American-born United States citizen now engaged in private capitalistic ventures on a "business as usual" basis in all Russia belongs to the firm of Paper-Strasburg of 251 West Thirtieth Street, New York. Its representative, Sidney Hollander, the well-known fur broker of Omsk, arrived in Moscow after seventeen months of fairly arduous duties in the center of Siberia, says the New York Times.

Mr. Hollander is a red-haired, stocky man whose home is at 632 East Ninety-fifth Street Brooklyn. He frankly admits that he prefers that neighborhood to the charms of fabulous Omsk. Although he speaks some Russian, he does all his business in the simple and satisfactory vernacular of any other Dodger fan. "That way," he explained, "I know just exactly what's going on, these guys know what's going on and nobody pulls any fast ones."

Ever since the days when Reichsfuehrer Hitler was occupied with his first big offensive against Moscow Mr. Hollander, who arrived via Vladivostok on Armistice Day, 1941, has been sojourning in the Hotel Sovietskeya Sibir, which—although he admits that he did not suffer from the lack of essential comforts—he does not recommend to his fellow-citizens of Brooklyn.

In that leading Omsk hostelry the representative of Paper-Strasburg lived in the center of a three-room row. The other rooms were occupied by Isaiah Eberr, Russian-born agent of Kastenbaum Brothers of 243 West Thirtieth Street, and Zelman Hurestein of the Anglo-American Fur Mart [illegible] of the keen competition between these firms, the representatives moved en masse from the Thirtieth Street block to a single wing of the Sovietskaya Sibir.

This trio of fur merchants is now establishing itself in Moscow because the Soviet exporting organization dealing with such matters and with which they do business—Soyuspushnina—has just moved its headquarters to Moscow from Omsk. Mr. Hollander was the first to arrive in the new fur center and is now recuperating from his lengthy train journey from Siberia, during which he lived on bread chicken, eggs, sausage, cheese, chocolate and herrings provided for his comfort by the Intourist agency.

Before dealing with the matter of this season's ermine and sable crop, Mr. Hollander confessed to a slightly perplexing personal worry that had been disturbing him. He cables his wife, Florence, weekly and recently received notification from her that his local draft board had reclassified him as 1-A. He added that he was only 37 years old and quite fit, and had served in the Army in the Philippines in 1925.

"The question which has been bothering me in Omsk," he explained, "is how I'm supposed to get back to Brooklyn in a hurry if the draft board decides that the Army needs me. How do I stand I ask myself."

Mr. Hollander, who points out that he is the only fur broker in all Russia, since the other two delegates from Thirtieth Street are strictly representatives of merchandising firms, said that, strangely enough, despite the war, Russia was continuing to send a considerable dollar volume of furs to the United States each year. The reason is that the quantity of skins reaching America is now smaller than the peacetime demand and consequently the price is going up.

Already furs have risen at least 50 per cent in value since the war began. The Red Army has become an enormous buyer and probably no grey Persian lamb will be exported this year because it is needed for generals' and other officers' hats and collars.

Mr. Hollander specializes in buying from Soyuspushnina ermine, red fox, white fox, silver fox, squirrel, wolf, raccoon, karakul, muskrat, mink, kolinsky, white fitch and sable. The catch now is considerably smaller than it was before the war because far fewer trappers and hunters are working—they are now hunting bigger game—and those now wandering the Ural slopes are generally less experienced.

Warsaw Ghetto Fought To Finish

The Germans were reported to have virtually wiped out the Warsaw ghetto by deporting 14,000 Jews to the east after three weeks of desperate street-fighting in which 2,000 were shot to death and 3,000 died in their flaming homes.

A secret Polish radio station heard at Stockholm on June 3 said the Jews in the walled ghetto, scene of other bloody pogroms since the Nazis overran Poland, had given a good account of themselves by killing 300 German elite troops and wounding 2,000.

The broadcast said the Jews defended themselves behind barricades as the Nazi troopers marched on the ghetto April 12. Resistance at the barricades continued until April 24, the report added, and then street and house fighting raged for a week or more as the Germans pressed in with the aid of artillery, machine-guns, flame throwers and light bombing planes.

Mines and bombs blasted entire blocks of buildings, and fires swept many sections of the ghetto, the broadcast said. Water, gas and electricity were shut off, and the Jews finally were forced to give in.

The station, Radio Swit, was the same which, on April 21, broadcast in the midst of the fighting: "The last 35,000 Jews in the ghetto at Warsaw have been condemned to execution. Warsaw again is echoing to musketry volleys. The people are murdered. Women and children defend themselves with their naked arms. Save us. . . ."

The station then went dead.

General Sikorski, the Polish Premier, in a broadcast to Poland the last of April, expressed his admiration for the heroic and desperate [illegible] to the Nazis of the Jews in the [illegible] ghetto.

[illegible] population [illegible] aided the Warsaw Jews, and urged them to continue their resistance.

An account of the Warsaw Jews' glorious fighting finish to their long martyrdom was received by the Polish Government in London in a message describing the Nazis' final "liquidation" of the ghetto.

Only 35,000 Jews had remained after the massacres and deportations of the past year. They were mainly artisans and craftsmen employed in the Nazi war industry. The Germans, accusing the Jews of "going slow," proposed to transfer the larger workshops to two places considered by the Jews to be "execution camps."

But the Jews learned of the German plan and prepared to make a last stand. When the "liquidation" of the ghetto started on April 20, a pitched battle developed between the S.S. and young Jewish workers, who erected barricades and defended themselves with rifles and machine-guns supplied by the Polish underground movement. Their resistance was overcome only when tanks and armoured cars were brought up by the Nazis. One corner of the ghetto kept up resistance for three days. It is reported that there were considerable losses on both sides.

Another message, signed by prominent leaders of the Zionist Labour movement in Warsaw, was received by the Zionist Executive in Jerusalem and Palestine Labour movement. It said that the remaining Jews in the Warsaw ghetto were forcibly resisting the Nazis in order to "save the honour of the nation and the remnant that has been left." The message appealed for aid to obtain arms and food for the children. It concluded with greetings to "the Jewish people throughout the world, and to the international Labour movement, says the London Jewish Chronicle.

According to the Nazi press the Wilno ghetto has also been evacuated. The number of Jews there in 1940 was 50,000.

Despite the difficulties of making deliveries, Soyuspushnina guarantees eight months' delivery after the signing of contracts for American sales, provided that shipment lanes are along the Trans-Siberian Railway. So far this year it has not failed on a single date.

Although Mr. Hollander considers that some day he may look back with nostalgia on his sojourn in Siberia, where hunters creep up silently to hit the ermine on the head with sticks and where it is 45 degrees below zero in Winter and hotter than Ebbets Field in Summer, he says that he considers Moscow an improvement.

Polish Jewish Leader Left Timeless Document In Suicide Letter

Said Passive Observation Of Murder Made Allied States Accomplices

When Szamul Zygielbojm was found dead in his Paddington flat on May 12, associates in the exiled Polish Government in London recalled his distress over the continued oppression of fellow Jews in Poland. They knew that his wife and child had been among the victims and that in his capacity as a member of the Polish National Council or Jewish Socialist party, he had worked untiringly to alleviate the plight of countless thousands whose ghetto homes were gradually being ground out of existence.

But Mr. Zygielbojm at 48 was only one man, and for all his courage, energy and eloquence, he could accomplish little against the avalanche of evil thundering across his homeland. He was a "little fellow" and rather sentimental, those who knew him well recalled. His principal obsession was that he was living in relative comfort in London while so many other Poles were dying in misery.

When he was found dead from an over dose of sleeping pills a few modest tributes appeared in the papers. Friends mourned him and pointed out that at least he had not had to live to hear the news of the final extermination of the Warsaw ghetto. That news came only a few days later.

There might have been no further record of the life and career of Szamul Zygielbojm had it not developed that he had left a letter. It was in Polish, typed on his own machine apparently during the night before his body was found. The letter was addressed to President Wladislaw Raczkiewicz and [illegible]

"I take the liberty of addressing to you my last words, and through you the Polish Government and people, the governments and people of the Allied States and the conscience of the world.

"From the latest information received from Poland, it is evident that without doubt the Germans with ruthless cruelty are now murdering the few remaining Jews in Poland. Behind the walls of the ghettos the last act of a tragedy unprecedented in history is being performed.

"The responsibility for the crime of murdering all the Jewish population in Poland falls in the first instance on the perpetrators, but indirectly also it weighs on the whole of humanity, the peoples and governments of the Allied States, which so far have made no effort toward a concrete action for the purpose of curtailing this crime. By passive observation, this murder of defenseless millions and the maltreatment of children and women, the men of those countries have become accomplices of criminals.

"I have also to state that although the Polish Government has in a high degree contributed to stirring the opinion of the world, yet it did so insufficiently, for it did nothing extraordinary enough to correspond to the magnitude of the drama now being enacted in Poland.

"Out of the nearly 250,000 Polish Jews and about 700,000 Jews deported to Poland from other countries, there still lived in April of this year, according to the official information of the head of the underground Bund organization sent to the United States through a delegate of the government, about 300,000. And the murders are still going on incessantly.

"I cannot be silent and I cannot live while the remnants of the Jewish people of Poland, of whom I am a representative, are perishing.

"My comrades in the [illegible] ghetto perished with weapons in their hands in their last [illegible] impulse.

"It was not my destiny [illegible] them grave.

"By my death I wish to express my strongest protest against the inactivity with which the world is looking on and permitting the extermination of Jewish people. I know how little human life is worth, especially today. But as I was unable to do anything during my life, perhaps by my death I shall contribute to destroying the indifference of those who are able and should act in order to save now, maybe at the last moment.

Hospital Honors Former Canadian

When Dr. Hiram N. Vineberg, consulting gynecologist to the Mount Sinai Hospital in New York, was honored at a special ceremony at the hospital's Blumenthal Auditorium, Ninety-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, only half the story was told. Guests heard once again that he is responsible for relieving women of suffering and disablement by insisting, half a century ago, that reproductive organs be conserved in operations.

But behind his career as pioneer gynecologist lies adventure and drama. On land and sea, in the heart of the tropics and the cold of Northwest Canada, he has helped suffering mankind.

In the den of his apartment at 1185 Park Avenue, he verbally toured the world in an hour, recalling to a New York Times reporter the days when he was a young doctor. The one thing he cannot remember is his age. He was born in a little Russian village years ago; "maybe 86, maybe a little more."

He was one of twins. His mother died in childbirth. His sister only lived two years. When he was 5 years old his father, who had gone to Canada, sent for him. There, in Cornwall, Ont., he went to school; helped to balance the books in his [illegible].

When he was 14 he ran away from home. With his cousin as partner, he got credit to start a country store of his own. By the time he was 18 he was able to sell out his share for a sum large enough to finance his education at McGill University Medical School in Montreal.

At that time McGill required all students to be at least 20. Worried, young Hiram asked a professor what he should do. "You aren't sure of your age. Put it down as 20," advised the academician. Four years later the young man won the school's highest honor, the Holmes Gold Medal.

Then he rowed for six years. His first stop was London, where he "walked" the hospitals. After three months he sailed as ship's surgeon on a clipper bound for New Zealand.

The trip on the Western Monarch took eighty-nine days. The captain was a hero, capable man, with only one eye. The doctor found himself interceding in behalf of a cook whom the passengers threatened to throw overboard for boiling rice in sea water — a concoction that made them ill.

He found himself truly a hero when he defied the captain and insisted that the passengers receive not the rancid butter they were getting, but the good butter the captain was saving to sell in New Zealand. The passengers' appreciation was presented in a testimonial on Jan. 2, 1880, at the end of the trip, thanking Dr. Vineberg "not only for his qualities as a professional man but also for those of a gentleman."

For a while he worked in New Zealand, then in Hawaii, where he treated for black tongue the Princess Liliuokalani (later the Queen of history-book fame) at the request of her father, King Kalakaua. He described her as a "big, fat woman with not a damn thing the matter with her."

While in Hawaii he visited the famous Molokai leper colony of Father Damien, whom he described as "the finest man one could possibly meet." From the warmth of the South Seas, he next worked in Northwest Canada, where frontier towns were bursting out of soil.

A few years of the cold and he made up his mind to specialize; to study gynecology. His reason? "I thought that women were more important and worthy to be saved than men," he explained, his keen eyes twinkling. He studied in Berlin, Prague and Vienna, and then came to New York.

In 1891 he married Lena Bernheim of New York. In telling how he happened to propose, he said laughingly, "Lena misunderstood me." She died, of pneumonia in 1937.

Ruth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. Silverman, 22 Fairmount Avenue, West, and Richard Roslick, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and [illegible], 3157 Esplanade Avenue, Montreal, whose engagement has been announced.

Tomorrow, Tomorrow.. Say it no More..
a story with a moral, by
GRENIER

That is the way it was with Lucy—always tomorrow. "Sometime," she'd say—"when I get around to it," she'd say—"tomorrow", she'd say—"or the next day."

She never took care of her Grenier corset—somehow or another she didn't get around to it. She just bought a new one.

Wartime necessity changed her philosophy fast. Lucy comes to lightning decisions when she has to. Today she treats her Grenier like she'd treat pure silk stockings. Gives it special care. She might not be able to get a new one. Says Lucy, "Believe me —A GRENIER CORSET IS WORTH ALL THE CARE YOU CAN GIVE IT."

POLISH JEWISH LEADER

this handful of Polish Jews who are still alive from certain annihilation.

"My life belongs to the Jewish people in Poland and, therefore, I give it to them. I wish that this handful that remains of the several million Polish Jews could live to see with the Polish masses the day of liberation — that it could breathe in Poland and in a world of freedom and in the justice of Socialism to which they, and its torch-bearing [illegible] and I believe that such a world will arise and that such a world will come.

"I trust that the President and Prime Minister will direct my words to all of those for whom they are destined and that the Polish Government will immediately begin appropriate action in the diplomatic and propaganda fields in order to save from extermination the Polish Jews who are still alive."

"rain of gold" which would shortly descend on Tel-Aviv.

The writer then points out that after the war the demand for land and property would be very great. Even excluding the expected flood of immigration there will be a shortage of houses to supply the demand created during the war. At a housing-meeting, held in Kiryat Chaim recently, it was estimated that Tel-Aviv would have to build 18,000 rooms to make up for the stoppage of building activity during the war.

In conclusion the writer suggests that the Government should take drastic steps against speculation and introduce control of prices.

for more than two years and were defendants in the Riom trials, which were halted by Hitler when they got out of hand and brought sympathy for the defendants rather than condemnation as traitors.

The Nazis feared the strength of these men even, though they were prisoners. Their transfer to a German prison was explained in a D. N. B. broadcast, as follows:

"It is stated in competent German quarters that the German government, on information received, has gained the conviction that the British and American governments intend to get hold of some French personalities who up to now have been in France in order to use them for the formation of a counter-government and thus cause chaos and disquiet in France."

When he was arrested on June 17, in a Bordeaux restaurant, he demanded to be taken before Marshal Petain, from whom he demanded and received a written apology for his arrest. Two days later he went to Morocco on a French boat, as he had said he would do.

His freedom there was short-lived. In Casablanca he was arrested and taken to a small town in the interior where he was tried for high treason by a court martial. He pleaded the cause of French resistance so eloquently that he was unanimously acquitted by the seven French officers of the court.

Two hours after he was freed by the presiding general he was again seized by gendarmes, who took him back to France, where he remained a prisoner of the Vichy government until his transfer to Germany.

Mandel became a protege of Clemenceau before he became of age. He was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1919. In 1924 he voted against the evacuation of the Ruhr and at the next election he was defeated, but was returned in 1928 by a small majority and the following year helped to overthrow Briand.

He delivered a scathing indictment of Germany in 1933, describing it as an "armed camp," with an army and war material factories far in excess of treaty limits. Before serving as Minister of the Interior, Mandel held the Cabinet portfolios of Colonies, Transport and Communications.

Mandel was never a popular figure in France but his bellicose patriotism was unchallenged. He was the delight of cartoonists for he was thin, sallow, emaciated, wore undertaker's black, and was forever lashing furiously at the government, repeating Clemenceau's message to France: "Don't let the Boche get away with anything."

No More Scolding about MILK

Mothers don't scold the children if they rebel at drinking milk. Make them rennet-custards with either "JUNKET" RENNET POWDER (ice cream) or "JUNKET" RENNET TABLETS (flavour to taste). These delicious desserts will be liked by the whole family. So easy to make, too. No cooking as they do not contain eggs or gelatin. Simply stir into lukewarm milk.

Canadians In The War

Among those who blasted the German dams in the Ruhr valley and brought record havoc home to the Nazis, is Flight Sergeant Observer Samuel E. Grossman, R 53039, son of Mrs. Max Grossman, Lakeview Avenue, Toronto. Grossman, who is 26, has had many tight clinches with the Germans. On his birthday last fall he helped to sink a German ship. "We were hit many times, but we all came through without a scratch. It must have been a pretty good show because the A.O.C. at headquarters sent us a telegram congratulating us. My log book and chart have some neat holes through them, so I'll save them for souvenirs. They gave us a special turkey dinner for the occasion." Another time his luck did not hold so well. His crew sank a Nazi ship, but they were shot down by the enemy. His mother was even notified to that effect by the R.C.A.F., but shortly afterwards a telegram stated that "your son was a member of the crew of a torpedo-carrying aircraft which landed safely at Thornley Island after being attacked by an enemy fighter. With the exception of one of the crew who was slightly wounded the remainder are uninjured."

Sgt. Grossman is a graduate of Bloor Collegiate and was a stationer before enlisting three months after the outbreak of the war. Overseas for eighteen months, he spent a year with the Coastal Command. An older brother, Sgt. I. Jack Grossman, R 88886, is serving with the R.C.A.F. in Alberta.

Sgt. Abe Nudleman, R 179499, of Montreal, who graduated as air-gunner from the No. 9 Bombing and Gunnery School, R.C.A.F., at Mont Joli, Que., is the son of Mrs. Isaac Nudleman, 4649 Esplanade Avenue, Montreal.

Harry Klein, son of Mrs. Jennie Klein, 4666 Hutchison Street, Montreal, and David Regenstreif, whose wife, Mrs. Ruth Regenstreif, lives at 5629 Hutchison Street, Montreal, graduated from the No. 3 Initial Training School at Victoriaville, Que.

Charles Shagass, of Montreal, has been commissioned pilot officer in the medical branch of the R.C.A.F.

Leading Signalman Roy Lerner, R.C.N.V.R., of Toronto, arrived home for a brief furlough after eight months of strenuous duty on the high seas. He is serving aboard the H.M.C.S. Port Arthur which recently sank a German submarine in the Mediterranean.

British Doctor Dies Hero's Death

While attending wounded men on the battlefield when the Mareth Line was captured, Captain Arthur Mackler, R.A.M.C., a young London Jewish doctor, was gravely injured in the explosion of a landmine, but he continued to give directions for the dressing of the wounded men and of himself, and was then taken to a dressing station. He died of his wounds two days later in hospital, reports the London Jewish Chronicle.

He was Medical Officer to a Hussar Regiment and at his own request he had gone out into the line to look for some missing men who might have been hurt. That mission completed, he was returning, when he saw a wounded sergeant in a tank. He had to cross an enemy minefield to attend to him, and it was while the wounded man and the stretcher-party were returning that someone touched off the mine that wounded the doctor.

In a tribute to him, the Commanding Officer of the regiment said how deeply they all deplored the loss of "Little Doc." "He was at any time the first person to jump up and go out to anybody's help . . . he never complained of his long spells of discomfort, and was always eager to be rendering his professional aid in the most forward part of the battle." A similar warm tribute has been paid by the Assistant Director of Medical Service, M.E.F.

It is understood that the doctor is being recommended for a mention in dispatches (which is the only award below the V.C. which can be made posthumously).

Captain Mackler, who was 27 when he died, was a pupil of the Jews' Free School, London, and later became a student at King's College and King's College Hospital, where he took the diplomas of M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P., in 1939. In 1936 he joined the O.T.C. and received his commission in 1938, after which he saw service in Norway, Crete, Greece, Syria, and Libya. His father, J. Mackler, served in the R.A. in the last war; his brother Alfred is a sergeant in the R.A., and another brother is serving in Civil Defence.

The destruction of six German tanks by a crew of six First Army gunners led by a 30-year-old Jewish officer was announced by the R.A.F. in London. The action has been described as "one of the finest and most valiant episodes of the Tunisian battle" and as "the best shooting we have ever known in North Africa."

The incident occurred during a battle in which the enemy lost a total of 12 out of 17 tanks during powerful attempts to push through the pass in the Medjerda Valley.

Standing beside the gun with his binoculars, the officer guided his gunners on to their targets. When he laid his binoculars aside it was to help in firing the gun.

The gunners fired steadily and with deadly aim, knocking out one tank after another, including two "Tigers." The team fired their last shell at precisely the same moment as the sixth German tank fired its last shot.

The shell knocked out the tank—but the German shot finished off the gun. One of the gallant six—a sergeant—was killed, and the young Jewish officer and two men were wounded.

Capt. S. Gershon Levi, Senior Jewish Chaplain to the Canadian Forces and first Jewish Chaplain to serve with an expeditionary force overseas, addressed a meeting of the Anglo-Jewish Woman's League, in London. Mrs. Barnett Janner presided.

Jews in the Canadian forces who have been decorated or who have been mentioned in dispatches in the course of the present war, number sixteen with the announcement that P/O. Hector Bernard Rubin, of Kamsack, Sask., and P/O. Seymour Bernard, of Toronto, have been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, according to the Canadian Jewish Congress.

P/O. Rubin is one of three brothers, the sons of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Rubin, of Kamsack. His brother, Capt. Mitchell Rubin, is with the R.C.A.M.C. overseas and another brother, Abe Rubin is with the United States Army. The wife of P/O. Rubin resides in Winnipeg.

P/O Seymour Bernard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. Bernard, 410 Crawford Street, Toronto, was commissioned in December, and went overseas the next year. Recently he shot down a Messerschmitt 109E which had attacked a Wellington bomber over Dusseldorf, Germany. In the attack Bernard's plane had to ward off a Focke Wolfe which also struck at the R.A.F. bombers. In addition P/O. Bernard has several other Messerschmitts to his credit.

W/O. Sidney Back of Toronto was awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal by the R.C.A.F. The official citation states: F/Sgt. (now W/O.) Sidney Back, R.C.A.F., No. 59 Sqdn. (Air Observer), (Toronto). "This airman has served with the squadron since January, 1942. The crew of which he is a member has been consistently successful on operations. He participated in many hazardous sorties against enemy shipping off the Dutch coast. In July, 1942, he made a telling attack on two 5,000-ton enemy ships in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire. Later in November, 1942, this airman took part, with good effect, in a most determined attack on shipping in a French harbor in spite of vigorous ground fire and adverse weather. Throughout his operational career F/Sgt. Back has set a fine example of determination and devotion to duty."

LAC A. Shechter, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Schechter, 29 Inkster Boulevard, Winnipeg, has arrived overseas.

Frederick Pascal, First Canadian Survey Regiment, Overseas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Pascal, McEachran Avenue, Montreal, has been promoted from rank of Lieutenant to Captain.

Canadian Soldiers Overseas Form Honor Guard At Centre Opening

High officers of the Canadian Army Overseas and the Royal Canadian Air Force attended the formal opening of the Balfour Service Club, the new London centre for Jews in the combat forces of the United Nations. The Lord Mayor of London officiated at the ceremonies which were attended by representatives of all the Allied Forces in the European theatre of operations including British Army, R.A.F., U.S. Army, Fighting French, Polish, and Czech forces.

Captain S. Gershon Levi, of Montreal, senior Jewish chaplain with the Canadian Expeditionary Force, made a presentation on behalf of the Canadian Jewish Congress. The Guard of Honour, composed of Jewish soldiers from all the Allied forces, was inspected by the attending officers. Among the Canadians of the Guard of Honour were QMS Charles Gorwich, of Winnipeg, Man.; Sgt. Max Starkman, of Toronto; Sgt. Mack Dolgy, R.C.A.F., of Montreal; LAC. William Bercovitch, R.C.A.F., of Montreal; and L/Cpl. L. Wolinsky, of Winnipeg.

The Service Club, which is located in the heart of London, is equipped to accommodate several hundred men and will be open to Jews in combat services and the Merchant Marines of all the United Nations. Over three hundred were present at the opening ceremony including Canadian, American, Fighting French, Australians, and New Zealanders as well as British men.

The new centre is situated in a large mansion, several stories high, on Portland Place in London, and includes a large ballroom, lounges for reading, writing, concerts and lectures, a library, dormitory, tailor and barber shops, and a chaplain's room. It is the newest and largest of several service clubs organized by the Jewish communities of large cities throughout the British Isles. The committee representing the Board in Great Britain is headed by Sir Robert Waley Cohen.

Patrons of the centre are Chief Rabbi Isaac Herzog, Lord Melchett, Lord Nathan, Professor Israel Brodetsky, Simon Marks; the President is Mrs. I. M. Sieff; treasurer of the Appeal Committee is Miss Clarice Davidson; Sigmund Gesteiner is chairman and the Committee consists of Wing Commander Neville Blond, Lewis Cival, Major Sir Jack Brunel Cohen, I. W. Goldberg, Mrs. Norman Laski, Albert Segal, Otto Schiff, C.B.E., and Captain Simon Jacobs.

The Agony Of Israel

By Professor Watson Kirkconnell, Of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario.

Bow your heads, all ye nations,
And humble yourselves, all ye peoples,
In the presence of sorrow unspeakable,
At the sight of anguish beyond measure;
For the sons of Israel are slaughtered all the day long,
And the daughters of Jerusalem are violated and slain,
And the synagogue is burned in the fire,
The place of the congregation is utterly destroyed.

These are the people of Jehovah,
The folk of the Ancient Covenant,
Who were spread throughout the earth
And were scattered among the nations—
Sojourners among many peoples
And dwellers in kingdoms far from Zion.
Yet they rendered good to the alien
And comfort to men of many races,
Seeking out cures for the ills of the flesh
And healing for the bodies of mankind.
Their words likewise were full of helpful wisdom
And their thoughts were full of understanding,
Abraham ben Ezra, and Moses ben Maimon,
Baruch the lens-grinder,
And Einstein, the seer of night and the stars.
Their psaltery also brought consolation to the soul,
Their music was balm to the spirit,
Even the music of Meyerbeer and Moscheles,
Of Rubenstein and Mendelssohn-Bartholdy.
These were a people of faith and promise,
Abundant in their gifts to all nations.

But the hangmen of Haman have arisen,
And a greater than Haman has come,
A man whose heart is filled with darkness,
Whose veins run with evil,
And he has purposed to destroy them all,
To cause them utterly to perish.
Therefore have the streets of Warsaw run blood
And the highways of Poland are stained with death.
And from every entrepôt and city
He gathers the hapless ones by force,
The innocent to a fate of horror.

Therefore let the nations gathered against Haman,
The peoples who war against the Agagite,
Swear mightily to avenge the blood of the guiltless,
To serve Haman as he has served Israel,
And let us offer refuge to a remnant,
Even safe refuge to the fugitive from murder,
That the guilt of his death be not upon us also,
The mark of his death upon our door-sill!
For we are all bound up together in the bundle of life,
And the Lord God will require the blood of the guiltless
Both of him that slays and of him that stays not the slayer
In the day of blood,
In the day of the desolation of Israel.

Fling Wide The Gates Of Canada To Refugees Or Sympathy Will Have A Hollow Ring

From An Address By Rev. Angus Cameron, Minister, Unitarian Church, Montreal, At The Intercession Service At Temple Emanu-El

The Nazi persecution of the Jews is not a new thing. The story of Nazi persecution is well known. It began in 1933. It was established as law by the Nazi State, by the Nuremberg Decree that it was the State policy, the extermination of the Jew. The only parallel for that in history, where it was a matter of national policy, can be found in the persecution of the early Christians by The Roman State.

One of the sad facts about this persecution has been the callousness and indifference with which it has been often viewed by the so-called democratic civilized world. Our democracies have been guilty of moral bankruptcy in many eras, but it is very doubtful if in any era they have been more amiss than in their lack of reaction to the Nazi policy of exterminating the Jews which dates back to 1937.

And now, with all Europe under the Nazi heel, we have seen that persecution extended until it takes the greatest penalty, and we have seen that damnable thing, race superiority, which is contrary to the teachings of religion and conscience, we have seen that insidious doctrine prevailing in Europe until that continent is a charnel house. And when we think of the broken bodies of those sacrificed on the altar of racial superiority we can almost hear the cry: "Cain, where is Abel, thy brother?"

When we think of those people, one day of mourning seems almost pathetic. For those Jews who live in Europe I can truly say they are happier who are dead. It seems to me that this day of mourning, and the Day of Compassion which was observed in many churches, will have served its purpose if it will sharpen our conscience and put a real burning fire in our heart and remind us that we are living in times that must go beyond compassion, we must seek justice. That is the only basis for the new world that is being built. Only justice will redeem the lives of the world's oppressed and persecuted ones and to that end we must act, and I suggest one or two possible lines of action.

First, I merely mention refugees. I think we should bring all the influence we can to bear on our Government that our Canada provide a refuge and asylum for the victims of Nazi barbarism, and all our pretence of sympathy and compassion will have a hollow ring until we have done that fundamental thing, flinging wide the gates of our country to the persecuted people of all lands. To that end we must work and act.

The second line of action I hesitate to mention, but being a Christian I feel I must, and it is a suggestion for the Christians in our audience. Our Christian religion is built of the great Jewish tradition. Jesus did not bring a new theology to man. He mentioned two commandments: Love God, love thy neighbour. They were already implanted and expressed in the Judaism of His day. Our Christian religion is deep in Judaism and as a Christian I confess deep shame for the part Christians have taken, actively and passively, in furthering the prejudice and intolerance towards the Jews.

I know whereof I speak when I say that this is active, and none the less reprehensible is that which is passive acquiescence. In the teachings of Jesus Christians have a positive weapon against racial intolerance, and we should combat that virus wherever it appears on this continent. In this country, in this city, we should combat it actively in the name of Christianity, especially when it appears in our own ranks, and I pledge myself, for one, so to do.

It has been said that Hitler has won a world war against the Jews. If he has, then I say Christians are responsible and Christians must right the wrong. We believe that brotherhood between man and man and race and race is built in the very structure of this universe. God has made man himself of one blood for all nations to dwell in peace on earth and that is the conception of brotherhood, the very basis of civilization. And so in the name of that great Hebrew-Christian tradition we must fight this poison wherever it appears.

Justice is the rock on which our civilization is built, the only foundation for the new world so hardly coming to birth, and the ultimate test will be found not in what we say, but in our social attitude and action. Only by action can we make our faith real. Let us go forth and stamp out from God's earth and from out of the hearts of men everywhere the last vestige of prejudice and intolerance, and only then will the cry of your dead and living dead be stilled and our own hearts quiet.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

Mr. B. K. Sandwell, editor of Saturday Night, has not let go of the question of the admission of Jewish refugees from Axis-controlled Europe to Canada, as you can see elsewhere on this page this week, and, in publishing another of his fine writings on the subject, this column feels impelled to pause for tribute to one of Canada's great liberals.

Mr. Sandwell did not write just one editorial on the problem or just one defense of young alien internees and their right to an education when released in Canadian universities, properly sponsored. His work in this regard was not done as a perfunctory gesture but in the spirit of a person aroused in the interest of justice and determined to be heard until the matter was taken to heart by others. His present editorial sustains the feeling that he did not take up the matter of Canada admitting refugees as a matter of routine editorial business that would enjoy a meagre, measured-out hospitality but as something that he himself intends to champion to the extent of his great ability and his considerable influence.

It is too limiting to call Mr. Sandwell a friend of the Jews except by reason of the fact that he is a humanitarian gentleman. It is correct to say that he is a friend of his countrymen of all religions, races, and nationalities of origin, and he shows this by the urgency with which he gives them light and leading for the expression of their better selves. He has told them plainly in a matter that calls for plain speaking that they are keeping the gates of the country closed to refugees because these refugees are mainly Jews.

This column has said the same thing; also that Hitler would never have dared to visit terrible disaster on the Jews had he not known that the other nations would be willing to allow him to carry on that way. But, as they say in a homely way down South, "hit hog hollers." For a Jew to bemoan and deplore the plight of the Jews today and to beg for alleviation, is the natural thing. When a Christian leader of the best thought and feeling in Canada does it, and time and again, it should be an expected thing, perhaps, but it isn't. A Jew doing this is only a voice calling for help, while a Gentile doing the same thing is the voice of conscience calling on his own people to verify their Christianity and give to their democracy some moral substance.

Only insofar as they suffer actually, and vicariously through the sufferings of others, is this matter of saving some of the Jews a Jewish problem. There is little, if anything, that the Jews can do about it. It is a Christian problem and the matter of facilitating the entry of refugees into Canada is a Canadian Christian problem which illuminates in a blinding flash of light the qualities of this country, of Britain, and of the United States. To illustrate this duality, Mr. Sandwell, speaking for Toronto Saturday Night, could not have done better than to select for contrast and criticism the Montreal Star for its opposition to doing anything on behalf of refugees in the way of admitting some to Canada.

This country in its most reactionary outlook is Canada making flimsy excuses; Canada willing to allow people to be massacred or starved rather than to find room for a few thousands in an under-populated, well-fed country; Canada being blasphemous in its claim to Christianity and hypocritical in its assumption of being democratic toward all; Canada preferring to demean itself as impotent sooner than to give a little charity out of a great plenty. It is this unadmirable part of Canada that Mr. Sandwell would like to lead out into the sunlight of self-respect and valid pride through the performance of a saving act of grace.

By the challenge of whether or not the allied democracies will be more generous to the Jewish refugees than their present weak and niggardly attitude implies, their basic Christianity and their essential democratic value are being tested. If Canada, for example, continues to do nothing, it presents an anomaly which it expects its young men to underwrite with their blood and last breath, the anomaly of a country which looks and talks like a democracy, all bound up in the pronouncements of the Four Freedoms, but which, in order to act like a democracy needs a fifth freedom, the freedom from hyprocrisy, the making of professions of views and beliefs that are false because they are not lived up to.

Mr. Sandwell wants Canada to face the crux of this question and to emerge with a solution that will stamp the country as morally sound. He loves his country and believes in it or else he would not and could not write a plea intended to range it on the side of the right. When Canada calls itself a democracy fighting for a better world, Mr. Sandwell wants Canada to mean it, for the reason that he is a true patriot, one who wants his country to be the best country.

Being the best country never did and never will rest on force of arms but on moral intention and a dedication to whatever is highest in the spiritual knowledge of mankind seeking more abundant life. Mr. Sandwell wants his country to be in reality what it claims to be in theory: a land of liberty, justice, fair play; a land which can become admired by the world not only for its grain and machines but for that certain moral element needed to fire the imagination and lift the hearts of people far away.

For its own sake Canada must open its gates at least part way and take in the hunted people. For its own sake Canada must do this noble thing, or stand indicted forever in its own sight of being utterly insensitive to human suffering. Only in that way can it place itself with the best in world leadership and justify its claim to being a Christian country committed to the democratic principle of equality. If not now, when? f.f.e.

Canada Bars Its Doors Because The Refugees Are Chiefly Jews

Toronto Saturday Night says:

The Montreal Star is opposed to Canada doing anything to facilitate the entry to this country of refugees from Hitler's tyranny at present, on the ground that it is useless, since "Hitler will not let them go from any of the conquered lands now under his heel." It then goes on to quote a distinguished British officer, Major Osbert Peake, as having revealed at Bermuda "that Great Britain during the past five months had admitted four thousand refugees," after which, possibly realizing that its earlier statement about the total impossibility of escaping was too sweeping, it goes on to speak of "the impossibility of evacuating refugees in any appreciably large numbers" — which is an entirely different matter.

There is at present a vigorous movement for a lifting of the immigration ban which prevents these people from even attempting to start for Canada because of the knowledge that they would be certain to be barred at the entry port. This movement, which we regret to find opposed by the Montreal Star, is supported vigorously and courageously by the Winnipeg Free Press and the Toronto Star and several other influential newspapers.

Its importance is due to the fact that a certain number of individuals, who because of their race are being systematically starved to death in some of the conquered or satellite countries, could escape to adjacent neutral countries, if there were any assurance that they would be permitted to proceed thence to some part of the world where the food supplies are more adequate. No country in Europe dares to throw open its territory to strangers today, with famine staring it in the face.

If Great Britain can admit such refugees at the rate of nearly a thousand a month, there is no reason why further escapes cannot be made at about the same rate for some time to come. The British, who are short of food themselves, have every excuse for not wanting to admit more than the dictates of humanity compel.

But Canada, which is not short of food, recognizes no dictates of humanity; it just bars its doors. And let us be perfectly frank about it; it bars its doors because the refugees are chiefly Jews. Canada is quite prepared to allow Jews to starve in Axis-controlled Europe, rather than let them enter Canada.

If they could not get to Canada anyhow, there would be little opposition to declaring that if they could they should be allowed to enter. But a certain number of them could get to Canada, and that is why the Montreal Star wants nothing done about admitting them. It is no use beating about the bush in these matters.

A Government declaration that refugees will be given asylum in Canada would not interfere with our "winning the war in the shortest possible time" and it might save a thousand or several thousand lives. To shed crocodile tears over the impossibility of saving "appreciably large numbers" while at the same time opposing any effort to save those small numbers who might be saved seems to us about the most cynical form of hypocrisy that we have recently encountered.
